STACY MOUNTAIN FARM

WHILE ELIZABETH AND DAVID DID GET MARRIED AT STACY MOUNTAIN FARM, the couple were approached by their wedding vendors to do an inspirational photo shoot at the farm prior to the big day. Elizabeth and David were able to catch a glimpse of what their wedding day would entail during the photo shoot, but without the stress! Captured was a light-hearted, romantic mood between a soon to be bride and groom.

Located in Madison, NH, the farm is owned by David's parents and holds a special place in the couple's heart. "David and I had dreamed of getting married at his childhood home for years before we were even engaged. It's a magical place where we have so many fantastic memories of family and friends coming together. We never considered any place else.

"I have always felt there was something extra special about weddings held at people's own homes; There is an intimate quality that I am thrilled we were able to create."

explains Elizabeth. There can be, however, an enormous amount of work and details to consider when hosting such an event at a private residence. Numerous family members were called on to make sure all the details on the farm were in place for the wedding. "Everything from planning the gardens and fields to bloom just around the wedding date, to logistics like parking and restrooms had to be considered."

The wedding was certainly a family affair when it came to the décor, as well. "David, my sister, mother-in-law, sister-in-law, and her boyfriend all went to the fabric store together to pick out various coordinating patterns for the table runners, cocktail tables cloths, and flags for the tent. Then a close family friend helped us make them all; from 20 table runners with custom made buttons to the cutest triangle shaped banner flags that waved in the breeze on our wedding day.” describes Elizabeth.

Family members were also incorporated into the celebration.

Elizabeth's Aunt officiated the wedding, and made sure the ceremony reflected Elizabeth and David as a couple. Then, David's 15-year-old cousin from Holland joined the wedding band and sang two songs for the pair.

Being on a farm meant there was plenty of space for guests to pitch a tent and go to sleep after the wedding. Over 35 guests of all ages camped out in a field, walking to their beds after a long night of dancing.
